Description	Marked and named 'Dangan Ho. Nunnery' on the 1st ed. OS 6-inch map. Incorrectly identified as the site of a Dominican nunnery (Gosling 1993, no. 539) this was an Ursuline foundation established at Dangan House in February 1839 at the request of the bishop of Galway, George Plunkett Browne. Wilde's description of Dangan House in 1867 as 'the original seat of the Martins, lately converted into a nunnery, but now deserted even by the benevolent sisters' (1872, 46), could give the impression that the nuns were in residence there to shortly before this time. However, the Ursulines departed Galway in December 1844 following bishop Browne's appointment to the see of Elphin in that year: they moved to Summerhill, near Athlone, and subsequently to Sligo where they still have a convent and school (pers. comm. Christy Kelly, 15 March 2015). It seems likely that Dangan House was demolished in the later 19th century when the Galway – Clifden railway line was constructed: no visible surface trace survives. DoAHRRGA have indicated that this will be removed from the SMR/RMP – (archaeology.ie 19/07/16) during next RMP revisions.

Description	On east bank of River Corrib 0.6km south of Mionlach Village. Only the shell of this once fine 17 th – 19 th century house survives, it having been gutted by fire in 1919. The original house was a long, rectangular 17 th century gabled house (length 22.6m, width c.9.2m) of two storeys over a basement. The east southeast façade, of six bays, had battered walls, a centrally placed doorway, a gabled parapet with bartizans at each corner, and a tall chimney on each end-wall, only one of which survives. Subsequently extended to west, and much altered, in 18 th - 19 th century. Parts of the walls at north end of the house may have been incorporated from an earlier castle on the site (GA082-064). (Bence-Jones 1978; Athy 1914, 155-60). Also BH 10 and listed as a Protected Structure.

Description	On a raised platform on the crest of a south-facing slope, in the house cluster of An Caisleán Gearr, overlooking the headwaters of the Terryland River. In existence in 1574 when it was in the possession of 'Rolland Skeret' (Nolan 1901, 115). Rectangular four-storey tower (length c.9.3m, width 7.5m) in fair condition: most of southeast and southwest walls are gone. However, sufficient remains to indicate the position of the doorway in southeast wall. The stairwell was in the southeast corner. The ground, first and second floors each comprised a main chamber with a subsidiary one to southeast. A stone vault existed between third/ fourth storeys and there is an exit to a latrine chute at the base of northwest wall. A possibly concealed chamber existed beneath the floor in southwest side of fourth storey. Most of the latter storey and the parapets above are gone. All the surviving windows are single-lights with circular, flat or ogee heads. (O'Flanagan 1927a, Vol. 1, 399-400). Also BH 13 and listed as a Protected Structure.

Description	Univallate ringfort. Bank is comprised of earth and stone and abuts the Galway Racecourse boundary. Approximately 25% of the bank has been levelled where it falls within the racecourse lands. Widening of the racecourse boundary allowed archaeological investigation to take place in the 1970s. An Iron Age spear butt, a hone stone, animal bone and post medieval pottery were recovered (Waddell 1973). These investigations uncovered evidence of a rectangular house foundations (GA082-013001) and internal divisions in the northern portion of the site.
